

Peter and Cornelius

First century Judea was an exciting and troubling time for the Jewish people. Soldiers occupied the land, maintained order, and ensured allegiance to the Roman Empire. The Jews yearned for the day when they would throw off the yoke of their oppressors. The Israelites worshiped the True God while the Romans and other nations engaged in pagan practices.

In the early days of the church, the Jewish followers focused almost exclusively on preaching the Good News to other Jews; that Jewish law forbid association with foreigners was still a powerful stigma. The idea that Jesus would overthrow the Roman empire, free the Jews, and rule as Messiah over the Jews alone was seen in a new light. Peter was to quickly see that many Jewish teachings were to forever change. He had a vision from God and, led by the Holy Spirit, he saw that God does not show favoritism, but desires that all people know Him.

This month our children will learn that God commands all believers to proclaim His message. There are no limits on who needs to hear; the message of Good News is for all people.
