

The Centurion's Faith

The days of Jesus' ministry were a time of much tension in Israel. The Israelites had enjoyed a period of independence under the Hasmoneans (beginning in 167 B.C.). When the Romans arrived as conquerors (approximately a century later), they assimilated Israel into their empire. In Jesus' day, Israel was still an occupied country, resentfully paying taxes to Caesar, careful to avoid treacherous acts that would bring Roman retribution, and hoping for a future free from their control. But among the Roman soldiers in Capernaum was one centurion who feared God and had earned the respect of the Israelites. When one of the Centurion's servants became sick, he sent for Jesus. Jesus commended the centurion for his faith, foreshadowing the faith of many gentiles to come.

Main Passage Luke 7:1-10

Memory Verse

Younger version Matthew 7:7a

Keep asking and it will be given to you; keep searching and you will find.

Older version Matthew 7:7

Keep asking, and it will be given to you. Keep searching, and you will find. Keep knocking, and the door will be opened for you.

The Centurion's Faith

The days of Jesus' ministry were a time of much tension in Israel. The Israelites had enjoyed a period of independence under the Hasmoneans (beginning in 167 B.C.). When the Romans arrived as conquerors (approximately a century later), they assimilated Israel into their empire. In Jesus' day, Israel was still an occupied country, resentfully paying taxes to Caesar, careful to avoid treacherous acts that would bring Roman retribution, and hoping for a future free from their control. But among the Roman soldiers in Capernaum was one centurion who feared God and had earned the respect of the Israelites. When one of the Centurion's servants became sick, he sent for Jesus. Jesus commended the centurion for his faith, foreshadowing the faith of many gentiles to come.

Main Passage Luke 7:1-10

Memory Verse

Younger version Matthew 7:7a

Keep asking and it will be given to you; keep searching and you will find.

Older version Matthew 7:7

Keep asking, and it will be given to you. Keep searching, and you will find. Keep knocking, and the door will be opened for you.

The Centurion's Faith

The days of Jesus' ministry were a time of much tension in Israel. The Israelites had enjoyed a period of independence under the Hasmoneans (beginning in 167 B.C.). When the Romans arrived as conquerors (approximately a century later), they assimilated Israel into their empire. In Jesus' day, Israel was still an occupied country, resentfully paying taxes to Caesar, careful to avoid treacherous acts that would bring Roman retribution, and hoping for a future free from their control. But among the Roman soldiers in Capernaum was one centurion who feared God and had earned the respect of the Israelites. When one of the Centurion's servants became sick, he sent for Jesus. Jesus commended the centurion for his faith, foreshadowing the faith of many gentiles to come.

Main Passage Luke 7:1-10

Memory Verse

Younger version Matthew 7:7a

Keep asking and it will be given to you; keep searching and you will find.

Older version Matthew 7:7

Keep asking, and it will be given to you. Keep searching, and you will find. Keep knocking, and the door will be opened for you.

The Centurion's Faith

The days of Jesus' ministry were a time of much tension in Israel. The Israelites had enjoyed a period of independence under the Hasmoneans (beginning in 167 B.C.). When the Romans arrived as conquerors (approximately a century later), they assimilated Israel into their empire. In Jesus' day, Israel was still an occupied country, resentfully paying taxes to Caesar, careful to avoid treacherous acts that would bring Roman retribution, and hoping for a future free from their control. But among the Roman soldiers in Capernaum was one centurion who feared God and had earned the respect of the Israelites. When one of the Centurion's servants became sick, he sent for Jesus. Jesus commended the centurion for his faith, foreshadowing the faith of many gentiles to come.

Main Passage Luke 7:1-10

Memory Verse

Younger version Matthew 7:7a

Keep asking and it will be given to you; keep searching and you will find.

Older version Matthew 7:7

Keep asking, and it will be given to you. Keep searching, and you will find. Keep knocking, and the door will be opened for you.